BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF TREATMENT OPTIONS

Detoxification Centres

For many people, a brief stay in a detoxification centre is the first step in the treatment process. Detoxification centres offer a safe, supportive, live-in environment for withdrawal from the intoxicating effects of alcohol or other drugs. Referrals to detoxification centres are made by outpatient counsellors, friends or families, clergy, social workers, and health care professionals. You can also refer yourself.

Once you have been admitted, you will be cared for by a team of professional staff. A doctor is available daily and emergency care that may be necessary is provided by hospitals in the area. The need for continued care in the detoxification unit is assessed daily. The length of stay varies greatly depending on your needs. Discussion groups and other programs including orientation to available treatment services and information on chemical dependency, are provided to help you prepare for the follow-up you will need after discharge.

To avoid disappointment or delay, please be sure to call first to make sure a bed is available. Sometimes it is necessary to wait for a bed. Your continued interest will assist entry.

Outpatient Counselling Services

If you have concerns about your use of alcohol or drugs, you can ask an outpatient-counselling centre for information and advice. Most clinics offer an education program to give people more information about the use and misuse of alcohol and drugs. Following the educational program, you may decide to make an appointment for a detailed look at your own situation. When you come into the centre, professionally trained staff will provide a complete assessment, discussing particular concerns with you and any family members who wish to attend.

Following assessment, you and your counsellor might decide that you could benefit from some additional support through one of the many special programs which might include: individual therapy, couple and family counselling, group counselling, assertiveness training, special programs for youth, activity groups, and a variety of other services.

Depending upon your needs, you could be involved in outpatient treatment for one to three months, although more time can be arranged as needed. Sometimes assessment will point out a need for residential treatment. Staff work closely with other agencies and will refer you if necessary.

There is no charge for outpatient counselling.

Support Recovery Homes

Often the use of Alcohol and Drugs can erode many aspects of life that were previously taken for granted. If you suffer from poor physical health, have lost the support of your family, or the security of a job, you may need to spend time in a supportive recovery home. These homes provide a longer program, typically 3 months, which offers you the chance to regain your health while benefiting from the support and assistance of other people with similar problems.

During your stay, you will learn how to deal with the stresses of life without relying on alcohol or other drugs. As you become healthier and start rebuilding your life, you will be encouraged to learn new skills and interests, explore job opportunities and become involved with others in the community.

Support Recovery Homes serve as good places to make informed decisions about further recovery. Staff can arrange for referrals to more intense residential treatment centres.

Residential Treatment Centres

Individuals who still have some stability in their lives, attachment to employers, family or friends, might benefit from a stay in a residential treatment centre. These facilities offer a short, intensive program, usually four to six weeks long. You will learn about alcohol and other drugs, how they affect you, and other ways of dealing with the stresses of life.

The staff will offer individual counselling as well as group therapy sessions and a variety of other programs designed to meet your needs. Since your family may also have been affected by your drug abuse over the years, they will be encouraged to participate in the treatment program.

Day Programs

In some areas, day programs are available to persons with chemical dependency as well as those who have grown up with problems related to alcohol and drugs. The programs provide group therapy and life skill training in a group format. Specialized groups dealing with women's issues are also available. Access to day programs is by referral through outpatient clinics, physician, counsellors and mental health teams.

Funding

Support recovery homes and residential treatment centres have a monthly or program charge. These charges vary. If you cannot afford the charge, you might be eligible for assistance through your company's Employee Assistance Program or subsidies through one of the Alcohol and Drug Service outpatient clinics. The appropriate government agency usually fund those eligible for income assistance. An outpatient counsellor can help you find out more about funding.
