

For Immediate Release: Public Service Announcement

Vancouver Women's Health Collective to begin film series.

What's better than sitting with a group of women, eating hot, buttery popcorn and watching a tantalizing film on any number of issues AND getting to discuss it after? Can't think of anything? Then the VWHC is the place to be on Thursday, August 20, 1998 and then the second Thursdays of the month for September and October.

The VWHC will begin a monthly series beginning August 20th with "Still Killing Us Softly" at the Collective at 7pm with a facilitated discussion to follow. "Still Killing Us Softly" in which Jean Kilbourn looks at how the self images of women, men and children are assaulted in the media. This is a sequel to "Killing Us Softly" that was also produced by Kilbourn in the early 1980s looking at women's portrayal in the media and subliminal advertizing. September and October films TBA.

Please reserve your seat ASAP - as space is limited - by calling the Vancouver Women's Health Information Line at 736-5262. Donations will be gratefully accepted.

The Vancouver Women's Health Collective is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing women's health information to the public and empowering women to take charge of their own health care.

The Collective is located at 219-1675 W. 8th (& Pine).

- 30 -

For more information leave a message for Tamara Flick-Parker, Education Coordinator, at the VWHC, 736-5262.