NEW DIRECTOR

Judith English, AIDS Vancouver Island's new Executive Director as of July 27 of this year, comes to us from Kingston, Ontario. She began the Kingston AIDS Project there in August of 1986, and is presently the
Vice-chairman of the Canadian AIDS
Society. Judith also brings with her four years of experience in palliative care, where she trained volunteers to become effective and supportive visitors to the dying and the bereaved.

Judith is one of only two women in Canada heading up an AIDS organization and, since her arrival three months ago, has worked hard to improve and expand the range of services A.V.I. offers. Her new programs include regular orientation sessions for all prospective volunteers, as well as specialized training for those who wish to become Speakers throughout Vancouver Island, "buddies" to a person with AIDS or ARC, and Helpline volunteers answering the phones.

Beginning January 7, A.V.I. is also offering a 12-week training program for people who want to be volunteer Emotional Support Workers. They will act as volunteer counsellors, on an appointment basis, for people who have AIDS-associated problems.

Reference Material NOT FOR LOAN AVI Resource Centre Besides offering personal counselling, A.V.I. has a "buddy" system where people who have AIDS or ARC (AIDS-related symptoms) are matched one-on-one with a trained volunteer for emotional support. In addition, there is Living Well, an ongoing support group for people who are diagnosed antibody-positive. There they can learn what it means to be infected, what they can do for themselves, and how to cope with it and go on with their lives.

People can also call the Helpline, make an appointment to talk with a trained volunteer, or just drop in to the office, Judith says. There are books, tapes and videos people can come in and look at or borrow to take home with them. A.V.I. also does a lot of public speaking to schools, churches, professional groups, street people, and the general public.

Judith says she's heartened by the calibre and diversity of the volunteers who are coming forward to help: men and women, young and old, gay and heterosexual people from a wide variety of professional backgrounds. "It's their enthusiasm and dedication," she says, "that make all our programs possible."

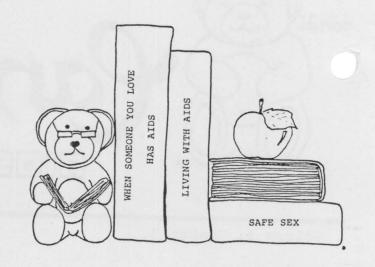

Judith is the first to admit that, even with all programs being staffed by volunteers, it still takes considerable money to finance the organization. AIDS Vancouver Island is presently funded by a federal grant from the Health Promotional Directorate -- a grant which is due to run out in October, 1988. However, A.V.I., like all British Columbia community-based AIDS groups, receives no provincial funding.

"This is quite different from some of the other provinces," Judith says, "and it's quite discouraging." Ontario, for example, has just given its community-based groups 1.6 million dollars. Community-based groups provide services the government doesn't offer -- personal counselling, support groups, practical help in day-to-day coping with the disease, and prevention education using street language when necessary in order to be understood.

"B.C. has the highest rate per capita of AIDS in Canada," Judith says, and the provincial government is missing the fact that community-based groups offer effective, inexpensive, and essential services in the AIDS struggle."

Donations and memberships also help with A.V.I.'s operating expenses, and Judith says that gifts of various items are very welcome too. The office needs a TV, for instance, for showing educational videos; they have a VCR but no TV. They also need a fridge where support groups and training groups can keep milk and juices cold. Even small items such as plants, pillows, and stuffed animals for the counselling room would be welcomed.

Asked if she finds it difficult being a woman in her position, Judith says it may be an advantage. "I'm a mother, and I think, being a mother, I can talk from the perspective of a parent who worries about her children. This is one way I can connect very effectively with audiences. Also, I've worked for several years in the gay community, so I feel knowledgeable and comfortable with gay issues as well, which is important, since most people who have the disease so far are gay or bisexual men."

"There's a lot of reward in t kind of work," Judith says. "You meet wonderful people and you're present in their lives at a significant turning point, at a time when they're thinking through what's really important in life. To have the privilege of being there at that time is both moving and very enriching."

books

We are currently compiling a lending library of books on AIDS and related subjects. If you or anyone you know would care to contribute any books on AIDS, Stress, Nutrition, Healthy Living, etc., you are finished reading, we would be pleased to receive them and make them available to those in need.

Dear Condi,

My partner refuses to wear a condom when we have sex; he says it's like taking a bath with your socks on. I love him and don't want to lose him, but I don't want to get AIDS either. What can I do?

Dear Unhappy,

First, you can ask yourself if you're sure you want to be intimate with a man who's so willing to risk your health and perhaps your life.

Unhappy.

But before you give up on him, why not try changing his mind about condoms? Buy a box of the new multicoloured ones and spend an evening with your partner just "playing." Blow them up into balloons, twist them into balloon animals, try them on as stockings and gloves -- whatever you can think of to make them fun. Then, try putting a condom on your partner as sensuously as you can.

Familiarity leads to acceptance, and once your partner feels relaxed and comfortable handling condoms, he'll likely be more willing to listen to your concerns about safety.

Got a question for CONDI? Write me at Box 845, Station E, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2R9. For a personal reply, please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Thanks...

We are pleased to announce the AIDS Benefit at Rumors Cabaret on October 8 raised $1,020.00 for AIDS Vancouver Island.

Many thanks to all those who made the evening possible: Rumors staff and management for their continued support; Jack Horne for dancing; and John Willms and Steven Glover for flower selling, which added a warm touch.

We especially wish to thank those who contributed to the evening through their financial and emotional support.

>> NAME CHANGE? (

The AIDS Vancouver Island board is considering changing our name to AIDS Victoria, to end confusion with AIDS Vancouver. We would like to create a new logo and put "Serving Victoria and the Island" under the new name.

We need to hear what YOU think about this. Please write to us at 108-11 Cook Street, Victoria, B.C., V8V 4A1.

SUPPORT GROUP

LIVING WELL, the support group for those who have tested antibody-positive, meets every Thursday night. If you are antibody-positive, whether you have symptoms or not, consider joining this group. We can help you learn about AIDS, give you information on alternative treatments, advise you on who and how much to tell, help you maintain hope, and introduce you to others who are coping with these and other issues. For info, please call us at 384-4554.

WE NEED YOUR SUPPORT!

CAN YOU HELP?

Our A.V.I. office is in urgent need of several items. Since our budget is limited, we hope you or someone you know will be able to donate one or more of the following:

- * a portable TV, on which to show our educational videos.
- * a small fridge
- shelving units for books and pamphlets
- * a coat rack
- * stacking trays
- * a typewriter
- * desks
- * a couch and armchairs
- stuffed animals for our counselling room
- * pillows and plants

Of course, a financial donation toward the purchase of any of the above would also be much appreciated. Charitible donation tax receipts will be provided for donations of money or goods.

Join us! Your input and financial support will aid in maintaining and expanding our educational and counselling programs.

"Appearances," the benefit concert held at the Newcombe Theatre November 28, played to an almost full house and raised over $2,600 for AIDS Vancouver Island.

Mayor Gretchen Brewin graciously opened the concert with a short message of encouragement and thanks for all those engaged in the struggle against AIDS.

Among the more than 90 performers who generously donated their time and talents were: The Vancouver Men's Chorus, Stages Dance Theatre Company, Ballazz, Jack Bell, Jeff Ronnenbergh, Dana Landers, Michael Yoder, David Eden, Lynda Raino, Kim Breiland, and Shawn Costello.

Local artist Luis Ituarte created the artwork that decorated each concert program, and assisted in the raising of money through the sale of his original posters in the lobby. Posters can still be purchased at the A.V.I. office for ten dollars, five dollars of which goes to A.V.I.

Special thanks go to the stage crew (who doubled as a comedy act), and all the other people who helped out that evening.

Concert organizer, Shawn Costello, said he was very pleased with the success of the concert. "Many of the performers told me they'd never worked for such a responsive and supportive audience. There was a real atmosphere of caring for people affected by AIDS."

Besides raising money for AIDS Vancouver Island, the goal of the concert was to increase public awareness about the seriousness of the AIDS threat in this province, and the importance of the work A.V.I. is doing.

WELCOME, NEW VOLUNTEERS!

The encouragingly heavy response to our recent appeal for more volunteers has done much to help us improve the services we offer. After the original volunteer Orientation Nights on September 8 and 15, most of those who attended have since taken further training as public speakers, buddies, or phoneline receptionists.

With the new additions to our numbers, we've been able to extend our Helpline hours from 10 am to 7 pm, Monday to Friday, and take on additional speaking engagements. As well, we now have more buddies to offer individual support to persons with AIDS or ARC.

We will be holding a series of training sessions for PHONELINE volunteers starting February 2, SPEAKERS beginning February 3, and BUDDY training starting on February 8. Prospective volunteers are asked to attend orientation sessions before signing up for any of the above courses.

NEXT ORIENTATION SESSIONS FOR PROSPECTIVE VOLUNTEERS HELD ON JAN. 12, 19, AND 26. PLEASE CALL US AT 384-4554 TO REGISTER.
